RE: May Revision Restoration of $49.8 million for Public Health Workforce Development and Training Programs

The undersigned organizations, representing the California Can't Wait Coalition, write to express our support for the Governor's May Revision proposal rescinding his January proposal to cut $49.8 million in public health workforce development and training programs. Our organizations additionally applaud the Newsom Administration for maintaining its ongoing investment of $300 million for public health workforce and infrastructure, including $200 million to support local health departments.

Local public health departments are the first line of defense against all public health threats, and these departments rely on a highly skilled and specialized workforce that are often stretched far too thin. Even before the pandemic, public health departments have faced significant workforce challenges. Fewer than one in six graduates from schools of public health go on to work in governmental public health and nationwide, and public health lost roughly 50,000 jobs after the Great Recession. The COVID-19 pandemic has exacerbated these challenges as public health workers have grappled with burnout and harassment, while also being heavily recruited by other sectors.

These programs are the few initiatives dedicated to supporting the public health workforce pipeline in California and seek to bolster local staffing expertise and skills needed to protect California communities from existing and emerging public health threats. Our nation has experienced what understaffed and under-resourced local public health departments mean for poor health outcomes during a pandemic, and California is no exception. We must continue to support the public health workforce and ensure opportunities for training and development.

Our organizations appreciate the Legislature's leadership in prioritizing public health and respectfully request the adoption of Governor Newsom's May Revision rescinding the proposed cuts to public health workforce training and development programs.

Respectfully,
